TOPIX made a strong start to the year and was up by more than 5% at one stage before falling in the last week of the month as the yen strengthened against the dollar. The market ended up just over 1% in local currency terms. Having largely ignored a stronger yen-dollar rate last year, the market was less forgiving about a 3% move in January although it remains close to the rate assumed by most Japanese companies of around ¥110/$. The fund had a difficult month with most of our stocks underperforming, notably TBS and construction-related companies such as Toda and Nippo. The index was led by a small group of stocks which included Nintendo and robotics names such as Fanuc and SMC.

Having risen steadily over the last 12 months, December's CPI data (ex-fresh foods) showed a rise of 0.9% year-on-year. The rate of increase remains well below the Bank of Japan's 2% target, despite being helped by a stronger oil price, but Prime Minister Abe is still determined to raise inflation. During the month he asked the influential Keidanren business lobby for their support in raising wages by 3%. Some companies have already co-operated with Orix, the financial services company, announcing that it would increase monthly base wages for 10,000 employees by an average 3.3% from April this year. Elsewhere, it was encouraging to see industrial production rise 4.2% in December which was ahead of expectations and up on the 3.6% increase in November. Machine tool orders were up a staggering 48% year-on-year in December and 32% for the whole of 2017, an all-time high.

Private equity buyouts reached a record $23.6bn in 2017 although this includes the substantial purchase of Toshiba's memory chip business which has not yet completed. Without the Toshiba deal, the total was $5.7bn which is lower than 2016 but well above the average over the last decade. The head of Bain Capital, which has been very active in 2017, believes that there will be a significant increase in private equity deals over the coming years as companies look to reform their businesses. More generally, M&A remains robust with Fujifilm announcing a merger with its long-time US partner, Xerox. The mechanics of the deal are complex because of the joint ownership of Fujifilm's subsidiary Fuji Xerox but Fujifilm will not be paying any cash and will end up with 50.1% of the combined entity. It was also encouraging to see Japanese asset manager Sparx becoming more vocal about one of their holdings during the month. Sparx has proposed two shareholder resolutions at Teikoku Sen-I, a specialty fibre manufacturer, which included a trebling of the dividend.

Companies have begun to report third quarter earnings numbers. Most companies have left full year expectations unchanged although Kinden, a domestically focused construction company, did revise up modestly. Canon Marketing Japan, which reported full year earnings, had good results and also raised the dividend from ¥50 to ¥60 to maintain its payout ratio above 35%.

There are signs that individual investors are becoming more interested in equities. Sales of the latest Japanese Company Handbook ("shikiho"), which contains data on all listed companies, are up 50% year-on-year. Nikko Asset Management's Global Robotics Equity fund, which was only launched in August 2015, is on track to exceed ¥1tn in assets in February. Greater domestic participation, together with more active M&A, should create a positive tailwind for the market which is currently on 1.4x book. Our portfolio is considerably cheaper and still trades below book value. If you would like to deal in the Fund, please contact Link Asset Services. Their telephone number is +353 1 400 5300.
