TOPIX Net Total Return rose by 3.2% in local terms. The stock market has been dominated by two events: the result of the upper house election and the agreement between Japan and America over tariffs. The outcomes of both were better than feared, particularly on tariffs which led to TOPIX reaching an all-time high of 2,978 on the 24th. Foreign investors have been net purchasers each week since the middle of April.

As anticipated, the ruling coalition of the Liberal Democratic Party and Komeito lost control of the upper house but only failed to achieve a majority by three seats whereas a much greater loss of seats had been expected. The coalition had already lost control of the lower house so this result is unlikely to lead to any significant change in policy. The tax cuts proposed by opposition parties will probably be avoided which has led to bond yields retreating from recent highs. Prime Minister Ishiba has vowed to stay on despite the defeat although press comments suggest his days are numbered. There are many details to be determined in the agreement between Japan and the United States on tariffs but the headline figure of 15% was an improvement on the 25% previously suggested.

The Bank of Japan's (BOJ) monthly meeting, which occurred after these two events, left monetary policy unchanged. In its quarterly outlook, the BOJ raised its core inflation forecast for FY 2025 to 2.7%, up from its April forecast of 2.2%, reflecting the higher prices of rice and food products, expecting it to ease to around 1.8% in FY 2026 before edging up to 2.0% in FY 2027. Inflation is becoming increasingly entrenched with the Nikkei newspaper reporting that commercial landlord Mitsubishi Estate will introduce inflation-linked rents, while Tokyo rents rose 4.5% year on year in June. The BOJ also revised economic growth marginally upwards for this fiscal year from 0.5% to 0.6%. As uncertainty has diminished, there is speculation that it will raise rates before the end of the year. It is worth noting that the BOJ has unrealised losses on its bond holdings of ¥28.6trn but an unrealised gain on its equity ETF position of ¥32.9trn.

The AGM season has finished. Sumitomo Trust reported that a record number of 114 companies had received resolutions from investors up by 23 from last year. Nomura estimates that 91 companies have faced activist campaigns in the first half. Many of these relate to higher shareholder returns through buybacks and dividends but are increasingly focused on better utilisation of real estate and idle assets, as we have seen with Fuji Media, as well as optimising business portfolios. An activist in Fuji Media has raised its stake to 16% demanding the company achieve a PBR of 1 through sales of cross shareholdings and the spin-off of Sankei Building, its real estate subsidiary. The board is proposing to implement anti-takeover measures if this stake is increased further.

The Nikkei has reported that M&A has reached unprecedented levels in the first half with 2,509 deals, up 7% year on year, while value was up 2.1 times at ¥20.7trn. There have been more bids announced, notably a private equity company has bid for lift maker Fujitec. Although this was below the market price the bid is roughly 5 times the price it was in 2019 before activists started to get involved.

The trends of the last few years regarding the restructuring of Japanese companies remain firmly in place and if anything are accelerating. We believe that our portfolios are well placed to benefit from them.
