TOPIX fell by 3.8% in local terms over the month. Rising expectations for Japanese interest rates led to the yen strengthening and the yield on the 10-year JGB reached 1.45%, its highest level since 2009.

Fourth quarter GDP growth was stronger than expected, recording an increase of 2.8% annualised on a real basis. This meant that nominal GDP grew by almost 3% in 2024. Similarly, core inflation for January was slightly higher than forecast at 3.2% driven by a rise in food prices and a reduction in fuel subsidies.

The Financial Services Agency published 2024 data for NISAs, the first full year after allowances were trebled last January. Investments made through NISAs totalled ¥17.4trn, more than three times the value invested the previous year. Interestingly, a survey released alongside the figures showed that 75% of NISA investors used "deposits, salaries and pensions" as the source of their funds, suggesting that money is starting to flow from cash and deposits into risk assets. Direct investment in Japanese equities accounted for ¥6.1trn of this total, a higher proportion than had been estimated initially, with a further ¥1.8trn going into global investment trusts including Japan.

Profit forecasts for the portfolio have been raised as a result of generally positive corporate earnings for the quarter ended 31st December. Recurring profits are expected to grow by 6% for the year to March and EPS to increase by 10%, the latter helped by share buybacks and profits on the sale of cross-shareholdings and other assets. Sumitomo Electric was one of many holdings that revised up its profit forecasts, having grown recurring profit by 42% so far this fiscal year thanks to its leading global positions in wire harnesses for cars, optical equipment for data centres and super-high voltage power cables. The company confirmed in a recent video call with us that the outlook remains positive; meanwhile the shares still stand at a PBR of 0.9x, not helped perhaps by the fact that the management have not undertaken any overseas IR trips for many years.

Once again it was the scale of shareholder returns that impressed. Dividends for the portfolio are now expected to grow by 27% after a raft of companies increased their payouts, including Canon Marketing and Sumitomo Mitsui Trust. Similarly, figures for share buybacks show that two-thirds of the companies in the portfolio have announced buybacks since April at an eye-catching average size of almost 6% of shares outstanding. Most Japanese companies have improved their corporate governance in the last few years, but these shareholder return figures are far higher than the average for TOPIX overall.

M&A activity has started to increase as business reorganisation across corporate Japan creates opportunities. Private equity group Bain announced the $3.3bn acquisition of pharmaceutical subsidiary Mitsubishi Tanabe from Mitsubishi Chemical, which had itself fully acquired the business five years ago. Encouraged by the new METI guidelines on takeovers, Taiwanese company Yageo has made an unsolicited bid for Shibaura Electronics, a $500m manufacturer of sensors. Supermarket chain Aeon announced the buy-in of listed subsidiaries Aeon Mall and Aeon Delight while the takeover battle between two private equity groups for IT services company Fujisoft was ended with a cash bid of $4.4bn by KKR. Honda and Nissan announced that they were terminating their merger talks, but the situation remains fluid and Honda is nevertheless proceeding with its 24% share buyback.

More positive economic data and solid corporate results support the continued investment case for our portfolio. Recent company meetings and Nick's trip to Japan have also confirmed that our companies are prioritising shareholder returns, while PBR and EV/OP valuations both remain attractive. The strong cashflow at our companies means that net cash and investments is still worth over half of the market cap (excluding financials), suggesting plenty of scope for these growing shareholder returns to continue.
